FOR SWEET CHARITY.

All over the country, the hearts of professional people are going out in charity. A few days ago the public could see the theatrical world to play for the poor and the theatrical people, through the generous, never fail to make a noble response.

In San Francisco, the Fair Madam de Held, the actress, sings on the stage for charity. These are but samples of other warm-hearted women of the stage who devote a day to the wants of poverty. As a rule their audience of people on earth as warm-hearted, generous and sympathetic as the women who entertain us from behind the footlights. It is rare that one of them says no to a call for charity.

While they are doing these noble, generous things, one hears of but few leading society people, with their riches and elegant leisure, who will give an hour's time to sweet charities. They should take their cue from the stage and be more generous and self-sacrificing. This is a season when it is pleasant to put one's heart in sympathetic touch with those whose lives receive so little of the good cheer and sunshine, which comes to the more fortunate and well to do. Let those who have a surfeit of life's pleasures, during the rest of the year devote Christmas week to cheering other hearts. Those who do it will be nobler and better for the giving, and learn that the best enjoyment one can get out of life is to contribute to the pleasure of others. The stage has always set the pace for this sort of work and if we are not mistaken the rest of the field is unable to keep very near the front of the procession.

IMPEACHING CLEVELAND.

Ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont, in a recent interview in reference to Secretary Olney's definition of Executive and Congressional powers, had this to say:

To recognize as a separate and independent State anything so mythical as the Republic of Cuba would put this country in a very undesirable position, and one in which no civilized nation would like to be placed. The Republic of Cuba has no stability, no autonomy, no organization, no capital. We may pity the condition of the people and deplore the atrocities which are being committed on the island, but to go to the length proposed is something which no self-respecting nation could do. Should the President veto the resolution and it be passed over the veto, it would be a declaration of Congress, which, perhaps, would have the same effect as if the President had signed it if he, as the Executive, should deem it had the lawful effect. But if the President refused to carry out the instructions of Congress, there would be nothing left for Congress to do but to either submit or impeach him for high crime and misdemeanor in refusing to obey what they regard as a valid law. But I have no idea that the resolution will pass, so that question is hardly likely to arise.

Unable to See it.

The News tries to make it appear that the failure of the Illinois National Bank was not due to silver depreciation, but to loaning two and a half million dollars to a railroad.

The managers of the bank, like the editor of the News, were unable to realize that the scarcity of money affected the people through whose territory the railroad passed.

The farmers did not ship wheat because it brought so little. People out of employment do not patronize railroads, and all industries are paralyzed by reason of silver's depreciation, and a railroad most of all, because it can only do business when all other business prospers. A banker who cannot see as plain a thing as that deserves to fail in business. He should get out of the banking business as soon as possible and start a gold bug newspaper in Nevada.

Sisterville, W. Va., is in a prohibition country. The inhabitants, for the sake of exhilaration partake of a beverage composed of alcohol, cinnamon, sugar and water and as a result 16 men were poisoned the other day, 4 are dead, 2 raving maniacs and the remainder seriously ill.
